SINO-BRITISH TRADE ASS'N IS OPTIMISTIC ON PROSPECTS

London Body Host To Chinese Consul-General

DE FRECE SPEAKS

Sir Walter Pleads For Boxer Fund Remission

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 12.—Toasting the Republic of China at the first annual luncheon of the Sino-British Trade Association Sir Walter de Frece said that there was every reason why Britain should support China in her fight through unprecedented obstacles to a position of undoubted trade importance. The object of the Association, he said, was to encourage China and the Chinese Government to attain stability, which every Englishman interested in trade hoped would be secured. The commercial possibilities of a great part of China had not yet been touched by Western traders. He hoped that the British Government would waive the Boxer indemnity on the understanding that it was allocated to the education of Chinese on Western lines here or in China.

Mr. Woodman, the Chinese Consul-General and the guest of honor, emphasised China's friendly relations with Britain since commercial relations began. China had never had any trouble with British traders like those experienced with other nations and Britain had treated China with the utmost justice.

Mr. Haynes, Director of the Association, emphasised the unlimited chances China offered British finance, shipping and industry.

The Mayor of Holborn presided in the absence of the Lord Mayor of London.

London, October 12.—At the dinner at the Chinese Legation on the 11th anniversary of the Republic at which Sir Donald Macleay, the new British Minister to China, and Mr. E. C. C. Wilton, the new Associate Chief Inspector of the Salt Administration at Peking, were the guests of honor, Mr. Chu Chao-hsin, the Chinese Charge d'Affaires made a speech in which he pointed out that Sir Ronald Macleay and Mr. E. C. C. Wilton were both familiar with China and assured them that they would receive a hearty welcome by the Chinese Government officials, particularly Dr. Wellington Koo. He said that China was in urgent need of financial support.

Mr. Wilton in replying expressed his willingness to assist the Chinese Government to work out the very delicate problems of the Salt Administration with his Chinese colleagues' cooperation.

Sir Ronald Macleay responding said that if China wanted foreign capital she must give a guarantee to her creditors.

A Romantic Trek From The Land of The Midnight Sun Through The Heart Of Asia, The Fantastic Land of Mongolia, And Mysterious Thibet To Shanghai.

IV—THE DAWN OF ADENTURE

By Larry Lehrbas

Russia, under the Czars, had a standard of illiteracy that marked it as one of the most backward nations in the world. For years it was described by word-artists and cartoonists as 'The Bear That Walks,' a big, hulking beast, powerful and surly, but unintelligent. When the first revolution broke out it was taken for granted by the outside world that education would become one of the first considerations of the new regime.

Education in Russia today, according to Serge, Andre and Mure, the three students who had excellent opportunities for studying the educational facilities of the country under the Soviet during their month in Tobolsk and time spent in crossing the great Northern country, is 100 percent worse than under the Czars!

"Since coming out of Russia we have heard considerable of 'The People's Universities,'" Serge says. "'People's Universities' are sprouting like the grass everywhere in Russia but what travesties they are!

The teachers, all Bolshevists, or under the eye of the Soviet officials, cram the heads of the students with Bolshevist doctrines to the exclusion of everything else. The Soviet propaganda-spreaders are often extremely keen men with considerable political sagacity, but the products they are turning out in the Soviet schools are half-baked, superficial and crudely veneered.

"FOOL'S GOLD"

"The labor and living conditions in Red Russia are just as impossible. Just as they glaze over the terrible condition education has fallen into, the Soviet officials fool even themselves in their political zeal to create a good opinion of the system they had set up in Russia and would like to spread over the globe. They seem to be dazzled by fool's gold of their own making.

"The food scarcity, of course, necessitates limited rations. In Tobolsk prison we lived on black bread, seeds and water. All over the country we found people eating—and ourselves ate—horsemeat. It's rather nasty, especially when it gets as old as some we were forced to eat. Tea is a luxury, salt is extremely scarce, sugar, a thing only for the officials, and milk and cream rarities. The population is divided into three great classes consisting of Commissars and high officials; students, Soviet clerks and minor officials; and the great mass. If there's anything good the first class gets it.

"Each class has certain amounts of certain kinds of food allowed each individual per day. The great mass of the population is without everything except the bare necessities to keep body and soul together. It would be much easier to say they eat black bread, potatoes, meat and fish very rarely, and weak tea once in a while and call that the menu of Russia."

The three cadets who followed the yak-tail trails of Ghenghiz Khan and his barbaric hordes have much more to tell of their experiences in Russia. The story has been told and retold, however, until it hurts the brain by its monotonous repetition of unhealthy facts for the mind.

THE RELEASE

Serge, Andre and Mure were thrown into a paroxysm of sheer joy when they discovered that as students they could join an expedition into Mongolia headed by Professor Saeojnikov, of the University of Tomsk. The expedition, composed of 48 students, was described as a great undertaking in the interests of the education of the entire world—a contribution toward Science by the Soviet, as it was to study the flora and fauna of Central Mongolia. They actually, as well as figuratively, jumped at the opportunity.

The three cadets would have joined an expedition to Hell to have gotten out of Tobolsk and its ceaseless work on pinched rations, Serge says, and that it was to be Mongolia did not enter into the question at that time. The youthful cadets, like other students all over the country, had long before began to dream, think and live in a daily growing desire for enough food to satisfy their wants. It was only several weeks afterward that they suddenly awoke to the fact that they were on the threshold of the mystic wonderland inhabited by the great-grandsons of the conquering barbarians who rode the long trails through the heart of Asia under the Great Khan's yak-tail war banners.

INTO THE ALTAIS

Within a few days after the first intimation of the proposed expedition the three cadets, as part of the group, boarded a little river steamer and sailed up the Dwina river as far as Omsk, leaving the vessel there to cross by railroad to the River Ob, and then up the Ob to Barnaul. By the time the expedition reached Barnaul Serge and his two companions were feeling almost like human beings again. They were securing much better and much more food—Serge is under the impression it was because they want-

H'KONG HOPES TO STOP DRUG SMOKING BY PRICE BOOST

Plan Is To Make Cost Of Opium Prohibitive

GOVERNOR'S VIEW

Essential To Control Sources Of Supply He Says

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, October 12.—Speaking to the Legislative Council today the Acting Governor said he would like to correct a misapprehension which appears to exist with regard to the requirements of the opium monopoly. In 1912 the allowance to the Opium Farm was 900 chests, which allowance included opium for export.

When the Government monopoly was started in 1914 the amount of opium then required for local consumption was put at 540 chests yearly. It was hoped gradually to increase the selling price to a prohibitive figure with the intention of finally putting an end to the smoking of opium in the Colony. It was, however, an essential condition for the success of this policy that all supplies of opium be adequately controlled at the source. This was a matter entirely outside the control of this Government and in the early days of the monopoly large quantities of opium were regularly smuggled into the Colony from the United Kingdom, but steps were taken at home to stop possession and export which resulted in a complete stoppage of this source of supply.

In recent years the Government has been faced with the problem of keeping out Chinese and Persian opium. It is well known that opium can be freely purchased in China at a price much below the Hongkong price and the wider these two prices are apart the greater the incentive to the smuggler until a point is reached where preventative measures with attendant abuses bring great harm to the trade and popularity of the port. It must be remembered that a place such as this, where thousands of persons pass daily to and from China, nothing short of a vigorous personal search can be finally effective.

The Governor regretted that the present year sales had increased owing to the more stringent preventative measures.

He is satisfied that for the reasons indicated a further increase in the monopoly price would not in the present circumstances have any effect on the amount of opium consumed.

CUNARD CO. TO ASK SUPREME COURT TO FIX BOOZE STATUS

Decision To Be Asked On 3 Mile Limit Rule

SEEK INJUNCTION

American Companies Seek Chance For Subsidy

(Reuter's Service)

New York, October 11.—It is stated that the Cunard Company will bring a test case under Attorney-General Daugherty's ruling that foreign ships may not bring liquor within the three-mile limit. The Company's counsel has gone to Washington to confer with the Attorney-General preparatory to petitioning in the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining the Government from enforcing the liquor ban.

American steamship owners are inclined to acquiesce to the prohibition regulation while urging the passage of the Ship Subsidy Bill. The Directors of their Association have issued a statement to the effect that the Association believes that the friends of prohibition will appreciate the situation and be among the strongest advocates for giving American ships every assistance necessary.

These dates include in the Chinese Calendar the ninth day of the ninth moon, known as the Chung Yang festival. Originally this was a Chinese family day, the custom being for families to go to mountain slopes and other high places for fellowship and contemplation of the beauties of nature. The program of the week will be as follows:

Sunday, Oct. 22—"Fathers and Sons 'Go to Sunday School Day.'"

Monday, Oct. 23.—"Fathers Day" (a special conference of fathers on boy-life).

Tuesday, Oct. 24—"Club Demonstration Day."

Wednesday, Oct. 25—"Get Together Day." Feast or Social.

Thursday, Oct. 26—"Mass Meeting for Boys."

Friday, Oct. 27—"Home Day."

Saturday, Oct. 28—The day of the Chung Yang Festival. Recreation Day (Excursion, "Treasure Hunt," sight-seeing trip, entertainment, or similar event, in which fathers and sons will join).

Sunday, Oct. 29—"Go to Church Sunday."

The suggestions issued for the week's program by the National Committee of the Y.M.C.A. and Sunday Schools Union can be secured by application at either of the head offices in Shanghai.

It is planned that "fathers and sons" banquets be held in the Y.M.C.A. and various churches in Shanghai. The Community Church is arranging for a banquet for foreign boys and fathers on Wednesday evening, October 25.

Spurious Liquor Case Opens In British Court; Arthur Mack Defendant

Former Giesel Company Employe Faces Technical Charge Of Larceny And Additional Charge Of Forging Company's Trademark

Related to the recent disclosures of the marketing in Shanghai of large quantities of spurious liquors under counterfeited trademarks, charges against Arthur Charles Mack, formerly employed by Giesel and Company, were called for hearing yesterday in the British Police Court before Magistrate G. W. King. Hearing of one charge of the theft of a large quantity of vermouth was remanded and remand in a second charge of forging trade marks was denied after lengthy arguments on the law pertaining to trademarks.

Under the first charge it is alleged that the accused on or about June 25 last stole 227 cases of vermouth valued at $1,362 that were stored in the godowns of Geisel and Company on behalf of the United States Marshal for China. It is set forth in the second charge that the defendant forged certain trade marks and trade descriptions by printing and stamping corks, capsules and packing cases with the name and trademark of Jas. Hennessy and Co. Cognac.

Mr. Philip W. Goldring appeared for the complainants and Mr. J. O. Anderson defended.

Mr. Goldring asked for a remand for a week.

The Magistrate asked for more particulars regarding the second charge.

Mr. Goldring stated that he took it that he would have to satisfy the Court that effective provision existed for the protection of trade marks of British subjects registered in the Consular Courts, for the punishment in Consular or other Courts of similar acts committed by the subjects of such State or Power in relation to or affecting the interests of British subjects. The complainants were Germans, and he understood that Jas. Hennessy and Co. were a French firm.

The Magistrate: You will have to show me the law on this. The definition of a trade mark is something registered in England. You have two charges. I have nothing in the Act that you can forge a trade description. You cannot forge a trade description. There is no such thing as that.

Mr. Goldring: If that is Your Worship's ruling we will take it out.

The Magistrate: It is not my ruling, but the law. Now, then, do you know the description of a Trade Mark?

Mr. Goldring: It is in the Act.

The Magistrate: Are you prepared to show me the particular act.

Mr. Goldring: I can show Your Worship that the trade mark is registered in Shanghai and Hongkong.

The Magistrate: What is Hennessy and Company?—I understand it is a French firm.

The Magistrate: Then we come to this. Is a German a proper person to institute proceedings for the protection of a French trade-mark in a British Court?

Mr. Goldring: I propose to prove that the International Mixed Court protects German subjects with trade marks.

The Magistrate: Do not forget that in the first place you bring this charge not under the Merchandise Marks Act per se but under the Order-in-Council. The Order-in-Council then goes on to say what provisions would have to be complied with for any subject who is not a British subject. It lays down that no action shall be brought for the protection of any copyright, trade-mark, patent or design by any person who is not a British subject unless either an arrangement is in force between the British Government and the Government of the State or Power to which the prosecuter belongs, or the Court

FASCINATING TALE OF GORGES TRIP TOLD ROTARIANS

T. C. Britton Gives Talk On The Upper Yangtsze

An admirably presented and highly interesting account of the trip through the Yangtsze Gorges was given at yesterday's meeting of the Shanghai Rotary Club by Mr. T. C. Britton, of the American-Oriental Bank, who took as his topic "Sidelights on the Upper Yangtsze."

Mr. Britton described the voyage up the Gorges from Ichang to Chungking and told, in graphic style, of his impressions.

He gave remarkable descriptions of the mountains rising sheer on either side of the steamer and the trekkers pulling junks up stream against the terrific current with bamboo ropes. He paid a tribute to the courage of the daredevil Chinese swimmers who brave the rapids to get the ropes free from boulders and other hindrances, while the trekkers strain to hold the ships against the fast current.

In describing the steamers used for navigating the upper Yangtsze, the speaker said that the rudder power was 96 times that of an ocean-going steamer while the engine equipment provides power equal to a United States Shipping Board freighter, though the Gorges steamers are less than 200 feet long.

Chungking is the only city in the locality that has never been looted, Mr. Britton said, and accounted for the record by describing how the Chinese Chamber of Commerce there bargained with the military leaders and paid enough money to keep the soldiery away from the city.

PEACE DUE TO FORBEARANCE SAYS BRITISH ARMY CHIEF

Gen. Harington Also Praises Home Government

PRAISES TROOPS

Confident Permanent Accord Has Been Reached

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, October 12.—General Sir Charles Harington has issued an order of the day announcing the agreement and saying that the arrangement was only made possible by two reasons, first, the wonderful forbearance of the British troops in the most trying circumstances, which was a fine example of British discipline, secondly, the action of the Government in sending out such splendid reinforcements, both naval, military and air force, without delay. He adds, "I am confident that the convention we have signed today will remove all danger and pressure from the British troops and help considerably towards the establishment of a lasting peace.

(China Press Service)

London, Oct. 12.—The Angora National Assembly has accepted the abdication of Sultan Mehmed VI of Turkey. The Assembly has issued a Pronunciamento declaring null and void all agreements, treaties and other government obligations entered into by Sultan Mehmed Bahid-Eddine Kahn on or after March 16, 1920 when the Treaty of Sevres came into effect.

(Reuter's Service)

Mudania, Oct. 11.—The agreement, signed at 6.40 this morning, provides for the evacuation of Thrace in fifteen days, the installation within thirty days, limitation of the Turkish gendarmerie to 8,000, the establishment of an Allied covering force on the west bank of the Maritza, the creation of a neutral zone inside a line drawn fifteen kilometers from the Straits with a demilitarised zone beyond and also a neutral zone on the Ismid Peninsula inside a line extending from Ghebzeh to Shilon with a demilitarised zone for forty kilometers beyond. Both sides agree to suspend reinforcements and fortifications.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 11.—The Temps, commenting on the Mudania agreement as announced in press telegrams, says: "The results gained at Mudania, thanks to the mutual goodwill of the Allies and the Turks, prove the efficacity of diplomatic methods, which France has never ceased to recommend."

The journal concludes: "When Turkey, reorganised on truly national bases, can work quietly towards reconstruction, she must remember especially that victorious France desired justice for her as well as for all other nations."

Sultan Was Figure Head

The Sultan of Turkey has been for some time a mere figure-head for the policies and actions of Damad Ferid Pasha, who has been the real man behind the throne in the Constantinople Government.

Turkey has been split into two factions—the one under the nominal leadership of the Sultan at Constantinople, and the other, styled the Government of the Grand National Assembly at Angora, dominated by Kemal Pasha.

Kemal Pasha broke first with the Committee of Union and Progress in 1908, later returning to Constantinople determined to oust the administration. Damad Ferid Pasha was tricked into sending him at the head of troops into Asia Minor and he there began to form the Nationalist party which now has its seat at Angora.

In a civil war that followed Damad Ferid Pasha lost the support of the people, but he and the Sultan were backed by the British. Fighting with the Greeks continued and the Kemalists, victorious, became the de facto government of Turkey. Since the signing of the Mudania agreement the Sultan has evidently lost all support in Turkey and his abdication naturally followed.

Thousand Fukienese Die In Fighting, Is Report

Following a victory over the invading forces in which 1,000 are reported killed, Tuchun Li Ho-chi of Foochow has taken the field personally and will lead his troops against the invaders at Sze Kong, according to reports reaching Shanghai yesterday.

That the situation in Fukien is intense is shown by the orders issued here by Admiral Doo ordering the Sixth and Seventh Companies of Marines, now stationed at the Kiangnan Dockyards, to Foochow, and a report to missionary headquarters here that a detachment of United States Marines had been landed and quartered in the Missionary Compound at Foochow to protect American missionaries and their property. No outbreaks have occurred in the city so the landing party is purely a preventive move. The British warship Foxglove is also at Foochow.

Two Chinese cruisers are at Foochow, but taking no part in the fighting as yet, but Rear Admiral Yang King-siu is in charge of the defense of the city during Tuchun Li's absence in the field and it is expected he will call on the cruisers for assistance if necessary.

More victories have been scored by the Kuomingtang Army in Fukien, according to the Kuo Wen News Agency. On Tuesday morning, the forces of General Hsu Chung-chih of the Northern Punitive Expedition bombarded Pesha from Kutien and Taku. The troops of Tuchun Li Ho-chi retreated in a southerly direction after losing three battalion commanders and over a thousand soldiers.

Admiral Sah Cheng-ping has arrived with the cruiser Hai Yung and the gunboat Chu Kwan at Foochow waters. He called on the Provincial Body on Tuesday. Martial law is in force in the Provincial Capital where the residents have organised volunteers for self-protection.

It is authoritatively reported that Sienyuhsien has been occupied by Kuomingtang troops while the brigade under General Wang Hsien-chang has retreated to Putienhsien where fierce fighting is being staged.

Martial law has been declared in Foochow and the streets must be clear of pedestrians by midnight, according to the Chung Mei Agency. The troops under Tuchun Li had a skirmish with the combined forces of General Hsu Chung-chi and Wang Yung-chien on October 6 in which several officers were killed and which resulted successfully for the Li Ho-chi men.

General Wang Yung-chien himself is in the field with his three thousand soldiers, who wear brassards with characters which declare that they are pacification troops. It is now reported that Hsu Chung-chi's army is moving toward the sea coast with Santuao as an objective from where they will come south, taking Foochow from the north and thereby completing a flanking movement.

In the meantime, the Minister of War, General Chang Shao-tseng, has been sending telegrams to Paoting and Loyang asking their advice and approval of measures to be taken by the Peking Government in putting down the opposition in Fukien. It is reported that the Premier is in favor of active intervention and is backed up in this by General Wu Pei-fu, who has already wired General Cheng Chiung-ming asking that he give his assistance to prevent the invaders of Fukien from trying to spread their power.

(China Press Service)

Paris, Oct. 12.—Lieutenant Mauzdam U.S.A. broke the world's speed record for heavier than air machines today flying in a Curtiss machine. He attained a speed of 220.46 miles per hour smashing the former record established on Sept. 21, 1922 by the French aviator Sadi Lecointe.

Hongkong Balance Sheet Favorable

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, October 12.—The Colony's estimated revenue and expenditure for 1923 as compared with 1922 is as follows:

	1923	1922
Revenue	$18,567,270	$17,276,260
Expenditure	$22,533,835	$20,198,980

It is estimated that the balance at the end of 1922 will be considerably over $7,500,000.

In the concluding address to the legislative Council on the first reading of the Supply Bill for 1923 the Acting Governor said, "Hongkong's financial position is a strong one and I do not anticipate there will be any large reduction in our balances at the end of 1923. This satisfactory position has continued throughout a period of worldwide trade depression which has been severely felt in the Colony." The Acting Governor forecasted the probability of loans to defray the cost of the Praya East reclamation scheme, harbor improvement and the New Territories Waterworks, costing several million dollars.

French Bank In Singapore Robbed Of $350,000

Singapore, Oct. 6.—The Banque de l'Indo-Chine in Singapore was robbed of $350,000 on Wednesday night, of which $322,000 was in thousand-dollar notes.

The robbery was a daring and at present inexplicable feat, watchmen being on duty inside and outside.

The police are making inquiries, but so far no arrests have been made.

One of the keys of the inner grill of the strongroom was sent out on Wednesday for a duplicate to be made, the grill being left open when the bank closed. On Thursday morning, the grill was found closed.

The robbers had to open two locks in the strong-room and four combination locks in the safe in order to reach the money.—(Hongkong Telegraph)

Mark Rate Shows Considerable Rally

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, October 11.—There was a considerable rally of the mark today owing to widespread reports that the Government are contemplating drastic measures to prevent further depreciation of the mark. Details of the measures are still secret. According to the Berliner Tageblatt the Government intend sudden action in order to prevent speculators from taking defensive action in advance. All accounts agree that the Government will deal sternly with traffic in foreign exchanges.

ed them to be well-fed looking exhibits of Soviet-governed epicures—and the incessant gnawing at their brains had eased under the influx of a broader vision, more healthy exercise for their brains, and rest after their days of perpetual hardship. Barnaul found them revivified in body as well as spirits.

Barnaul to them was the beginning of a great adventure. It was the outpost of the vast heart of Asia to the South, the start of a great and romantic trek that was to take them into a country of which they knew nothing, among strange peoples living in strange ways. Encircled by spreading offshoots of the Altai Mountains, Barnaul is the capital of the Altai region with its mines, smelting works and factories, and surrounded by a country that gave its residents the lavish fruits of agriculture in return for its manufactured goods and work. Serge gained five pounds during the week the expedition was in Barnaul. His chief occupation was putting his feet under the table and accustoming his stomach to the delights of foods long denied that sensitive organ. If Serge were well versed in the idiosyncracies of American slang he would have described Barnaul as being "cat's pajamas."

While Prof. Sacojnikov visited the museum in Barnaul and completed the final arrangements for the expedition's entry into the strange land they were about to visit Serge, his companions and the other 45 students gathered the necessary supplies. With expectations of living off the country as much as possible only such staples as were absolutely required were taken, as every extra pound of rations or implements meant extra horses and helpers.

After one week in Barnaul the expedition boarded ship once more for a one day's sail up to Bilsk, the commercial center of the Siberian Altai. Bilsk boasts a population of about 35,000 and is the center of a rich dairying region, and, after the lethargy of the withering and dying country they had passed through, seemed a beehive of activity. Serge likes milk—and he hadn't had enough for ages—and Bilsk was literally bathed in lacteal fluid. His companions recount that Serge kept four cows busy delivering supplies while he was in Bilsk.

Bilsk, too, has been connected up with Nicolaievsk and other towns on the Trans-Siberian Railway, just long enough to feel like a thriving young city, and to have its citizens imbibe some of those boosting qualities that go to make up the pep and cheerful outlook exhibited by Chambers of Commerce in bustling young American communities. By the time Serge and his companions left Bilsk on the long, long trek that was to end in Shanghai Serge felt like he could tackle Ghenghiz Khan at catch-weights and knock him for a row of tinplate pagodas.

And so he slept the last night in an honest-to-heck bed in Bilsk, awaiting the dawn of the day that was to see the start of the romantic adventure.

In the fifth story of this series, describing the wanderlust trail the young Russian student followed in the wake of the picturesque Khan's yak-tail banners among his own people, which appears tomorrow, the trip through the scenic Altai Mountains will be chronicled.

Spurious Liquor Case Opens In British Court

is satisfied that effective effectual provision exists for the protection in Consular Courts or other Courts in China of the rights and interests of British subjects in copyrights, trade-marks, patents and designs infringed by the subjects of such State or Power.

You will have to go a long way to satisfy me if the complainant is a German subject. You will have to show that a German in China can prosecute a British subject for a certain offence, which I am told, is a French trade-mark.

I cannot give you a remand on the second charge unless you satisfy me on this point.

It is interesting at this stage. The present accused was in the employ of Giesel and Company. If you look at section two of the Merchandise Marks Act you will read this: "Every person who sells or exposes for sale." The section holds the master guilty of the offence even though the act is done by the servant. In this case where there is an English law, the possibility of the master being criminally liable for the acts of his servant does not raise any doubt. The question is: Is the master the proper person to prosecute? He must be criminally liable, if he were a British subject.

Mr. Goldring: He is now being prosecuted in the French Court.

The Magistrate: I do not know what the French law is. The British law states that a master is not innocent. In the ordinary way your client would be alongside the defendant in the dock.

Mr. Goldring: We come here to establish our bona fide and clear ourselves. We prosecute this man because we are being prosecuted.

The Magistrate: Now, you put down your cards. Suppose the French Court finds Giesel guilty could he prosecute this man?

Mr. Goldring: Certainly, he can.

The Magistrate: How can a guilty man prosecute? You have to go a long way. Have you got the consent of the French Court to prosecute this defendant?

Mr. Goldring: I understand that they have consented.

The Magistrate: Why do they not prosecute themselves?

Mr. Goldring: My instructions and my real belief are that the Hennessy trade mark is registered in Hongkong and in this place.

The Magistrate: That does not interest me. You must conform to the law. Shanghai is not a British possession. You have to act up to the British law. Is that not an illucidation that the proper person is the person who is affected? Hennessy's have been affected and they would be the proper persons. You say that Hennessy's are a French firm.

Mr. Goldring: I can satisfy Your Worship that they are a French firm by producing the license.

The Magistrate: What interest has Giesel got. Have you got the proper party before this Court to proceed? You cannot get a remand on the second charge unless you satisfy me.

Mr. Goldring: I do not wish to withdraw that charge. It takes me by surprise.

The Magistrate: No, not in the least.

Mr. Goldring: I have not been able to see my witnesses.

The Magistrate: It is not a question of witnesses. It is not a proper charge. The charge is framed under the Order-in-Council. Looking at the Merchandise Marks Act, you cannot charge him him with forging trade descriptions.

Mr. Goldring: I have already asked Your Worship to strike out "trade descriptions" from the charge sheet.

Mr. Anderson: I would like the second charge to be dealt with. Besides what your Worship has set out on the Order-in-Council the prosecuter must show to the Court that he is an interested party quite apart from the fact whether he can satisfy the Court with the compliance of the provisions under section two of the Merchandise Marks Act. The whole object of the Merchandise Marks Act is to protect the owner of trade marks and provision two clearly shows that a British Court will not protect a trade-mark of a foreign citizen or subject unless his Court will protect British trade marks or his government has made arrangements with the British government.

The Magistrate remarked that there was a treaty between China and Germany. The question was whether the Chinese Courts outside Shanghai would entertain this section.

Mr. Anderson said that he did not know the provisions of the treaty between Germany and China.

The Magistrate: You will have to satisfy me that effective provision exists between China and Germany with regard to the interests of British subjects. You will have to show me, that assuming that Germany has extraterritorial rights in China, if a British subject prosecutes a German in the German Court, the German Court would punish the defendant. Germany has lost her extraterritoriality rights, and in this case you will have to show that the Chinese Court will punish the offender. You will have to show me that all the Courts would do the same. You get surprises in China quite a lot. I am not holding against you, Mr. Goldring. You will have to show me that the people whose trade-marks are registered are the proper people interested.

Mr. Anderson: My submission is that the prosecutor must show who is interested.

The Magistrate: I have nothing to show me that the prosecutor must be interested. The whole proviso is that the British Government will protect a trade mark of a foreign subject or citizen if his Court will protect British trade mark. Take the case of a nation that never had extraterritorial rights, what would their position be? They would have to go automatically to the Chinese Court.

Mr. Anderson: Naturally.

The Magistrate: That is a different proposition to a country that had extraterritorial rights and lost them. The German subject must go to Chinese law.

Mr. Anderson: If there were no extraterritorial rights there would be no Order-in-Council.

The Magistrate: Of course, not. We are not discussing the future.

Mr. Goldring said he would like to add an additional charge against the defendant. The charge was that the defendant on September 5, 1922, stole a quantity of bottles, capsules, etc. valued at $170 and a quantity of French wine valued at Tls. 250, the property of the complainants, from their godown at 1a Chaofoong Road.

A remand for a week was granted and the bail was reduced from $3,000 to two sureties of $500 each.

Charge Shop Man With Firing House To Cover Thefts

Another arson charge was brought in the Mixed Court yesterday when a shop assistant was brought to trial for firing a dwelling house at 439 Kiukiang Road.

Detective Sergeant Douglas, appearing to prosecute for the police, said that the fire took place at 6:20 p.m. Wednesday. He asked a remand, as the affair was a very complicated one. It appeared, he stated, that the accused had set the house on fire in order to cover up certain thefts.

Mr. R. S. Haskell also appeared in the case with the police for the prosecution.

The accused was ordered remanded in custody for one week.

SEATS ON SALE FOR SHRINERS' MINSTREL SHOW

Seats are now on sale for the Annual Shrine Minstrel Show which will be given at the Olympic Theater on the 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th of this month, with one matinee. While the regular booking is taking place at Montrie's, the Minstrel officers have placed tickets in the hands of many of their members, from whom orders can be had, same to be exchanged for regular seats at Montrie's booking office. There are two rates, $3 and $2.

The progress and the results so far forecast a show which will far excel the very successful Minstrel of last year. Mr. Jack Rayner has just returned from the States with some excellent new material in the way of special acts and music and some new ideas. Mr. E. P. Graham-Barrow, Technical Director, Mr. Mena Silas, Mr. A. F. Blanchard, Mr. Lee Solomon, and the other officers of the Minstrel are sparing no expense or effort to produce the best Minstrel show which has yet been seen in Shanghai.

This Minstrel is not without its serious side. In keeping with the fine spirit of the charity in which the Shrine bodies everywhere are engaged, the local Nomad Oasis is also devoting efforts to the cause of the children. In America, the Shrine is establishing and maintaining in increasing numbers hospitals for crippled and invalid children of whatever race, color or creed. In Shanghai, the John R. Hykes Memorial has been established for the benefit of needy and deserving children, and the proceeds of this Minstrel show are intended as a foundation for that purpose.

The Minstrel officers feel so enthusiastic about the show that they have scheduled it to run for four evenings and one matinee, and are expecting to have full houses for all performances. The bookings already indicate that their expectations will be fully realised.

Fistic Encounter Leads To Discovery Of Opium Packets

Ofttimes the ultimate upshot of an affair is widely divergent from the result which would seem to be indicated by the preliminaries.

For instance, consider the embroglio which attracted the attention of a Chinese constable on North Soochow Road Wednesday evening. As far as the policeman could see and as far as was obvious to the interested onlookers, it was merely an active fistic encounter between two women, on the one side, and a lone Chinese male on the other. The true inwardness of the matter came to light at the police station a short time later and at the Mixed Court yesterday.

At the station the women were found to have concealed on their persons an aggregate of twelve packets of opium. At the Mixed Court yesterday the man in the case admitted that he knew of the contraband cargo and that he had tried to frighten the possessors into a division by threatening to take them to the police station.

The climax which struck the court as most logical and equitable was to send the two women to jail for a month for being possessed of the drug and to assign the man a similar sentence for impersonating a police officer.

News Brevities

Chen Kuo-jui, the last of the Fukien students, charged in the Nantao Criminal Court with having murdered a Foochow merchant during the students' movement, was released yesterday after he was adjudged not guilty by the local Court. This concludes one of the most bitterly fought criminal cases in the history of Shanghai courts. Originally nine students were charged. All of the accused except Chen were released following protests from the local Fukien Guild and the Students' Union. One of the accused however died in prison before the trial.

NOTHING SO IMPORTANT ON LINKS AS GOLF MANNERS

By Wesla

With the arrival of cooler weather the swish and the swash of the golfer is heard in the land, as, recklessly, he ploughs up the landscape and churns the inclensive air with his mashie and brassie, causing the few remaining remnants of the population in which sanity continues to abide to ask, wonderingly, who turned him loose.

As a matter of fact it is not only the non-golfers who ask who turned him loose. That question is being asked by the ol' timers as well, for in Shanghai as in all other parts of the world where golf is played there is nothing so exasperating as the average golfing beginner. This does not apply to all beginners, as there are some to-be-congratulated tyros in the game who, fortunately, do not divorce themselves from their common sense or from their gentlemanly or ladylike qualities the instant they find themselves alongside a teed up golf ball with a driver in their hands.

The average golfing beginner does not realise, perhaps through no fault of his own, that golf, through the centuries in which it has been played, has acquired an etiquette, or code of manners, that is more rigid, and more noticeable in its breach, than that which surrounds any other game.

There is a code of sportsmanship, as well as a code of playing rules for all games, naturally, but in no other game is the sportsmanship code so rigidly drawn as in golf. This is true because golf, more than any other game, puts the player on his honor. It provides severer tests of honesty than any other game, and for the very reason that these tests are more severe, so are the failures to observe them more glaring, and attended with greater penalties.

DIFFERENT CODES

Contrast, for instance, the cricket code (to name another game at random) and the golf code. In cricket the players observe certain rules of sportsmanship, but do so not only because it is their desire, but also because they are compelled to observe them. This compulsion springs from the fact that in cricket all the players are under the constant observation of the other players, and of the spectators, which means instant detection of any violation of the code, and, of course, the infliction of the penalty that goes with it.

In golf, nobody is watching. The "lie" might be improved by the merest flick of the clubhead, or the toe of the shoe without attracting anybody's attention. After the putts are holed the player, in giving his score, often has the opportunity to undercount his total. Nobody saw him as he made his strokes; nobody but himself will ever know the difference. His opponent, unless the undercount is glaring, will not suspect him of any wrongdoing.

It can be seen therefore, that more depends on the player's absolute honesty than in any other game, and for that identical reason the golfing "code" is stiffer than that of any other game.

And just as the sportsmanship code is more rigid, so is the code of playing manners that has been built up for the game.

THINGS "NOT DONE"

In golf, certain things are "not done," except by those who, as stated, leave all their common sense and all their gentlemanly and ladylike attributes at home when they go to the links. And if those who continue to transgress these written and unwritten laws of this wonderful game knew how utterly depraved they appear to the real golfer; how ill mannered and uncouth; how coarse and ill bred, even, they surely would make immediate efforts to mend their ways.

Perhaps there are some who are sincerely anxious to do the "right thing" on the golf course but who do not know how. These should make it their first duty to purchase a book of golf rules, copies of which, inexpensively printed, can be found in sporting goods, stationery and book stores.

Here are some of the "rules of golf etiquette" that will be found in these books:

Chess Devotees Hear Interesting Lecture On Morphy

An interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. M. Diamant at the International Club on the subject of "Paul Morphy and his influence on modern chess." There was a good attendance and many new members were enrolled.

Paul Morphy was a gifted player at chess even at the early age of twelve, and by the age of 20 he had defeated all the best players in his own city, New Orleans. In the year 1857 the New York Chess Club organised a tournament in which all the leading chess players in the United States took part, and Morphy won and became the champion of the United States. His play produced such enthusiasm that the American Chess Association issued a challenge to the foremost players of the whole world and offered a stake of $500. At that time the two best players in Europe were Staunton in England, and Andersen in Germany, but as both of these were unable to accept the challenge Morphy visited Europe.

There he began a series of glorious victories. In England he met and defeated all the leading chess players with the exception of the champion, Staunton, who avoided meeting the American champion. Staunton was morbidly vain and perhaps was afraid of losing his reputation by losing to Morphy.

From his victories in England Morphy went to France, and in Paris met the leading players, and attracted large crowds at the famous Cafe de la Regence where the games were played. There he met the German champion Andersen and defeated him, winning seven out of nine games.

Upon his return to America he was feted as a national hero, and the New York Ledger paid him $3,000 in advance for writing a chess column for that paper. Morphy is generally regarded as a genius who developed methods of direct attack upon the king which form such an important element in the game of chess.

your opponent is playing his stroke.

Stand in front of your fellow player while he is making his stroke. "In front" does not mean in the line of flight of his ball but in front of him as he takes his stance. The logic of this rule may not be apparent to the beginner, but there is a very good reason for it. When you are in front of the player who is making his stroke his eyes are looking downward toward his ball, which means that he cannot see anything in front of him. If you stand at his side, or back of him he can see you out of the corner of his eye, and that may distract him and interfere with his stroke.

DON'T WALK AHEAD

Do not walk ahead of the player who is "away," that is, farthest from the hole. If your shot carries farther than his, wait until he shoots, even if your ball is on side of the fairway and his on the other. The player who is farthest from the hole makes his stroke first. This applies on the putting green as well as through the fairway. The player, or in foursomes the "side" that won the last hole shoots first from the next tee. This is called the "honor." When a hole is halved the honor is retained by the player, or side, that had it at the previous hole.

It is the player's duty to see that his caddy observes the etiquette of the game. Don't allow your caddy to walk past a fellow player, rattling and jangling your clubs, as he is about to take his stroke.

Always be absolutely scrupulous in your count. Nothing is more disgusting to a real golfer, when asking an opponent how many strokes he took on a hole, than a reply such as: "Oh, about eight," or "Seven, I guess," or a similar slovenly reply. It is also bad manners, when asked about your score, to look back toward the tee and try to recall your shots. You should know exactly how you stand on a hole at all times. Experienced golfers keep track of their score by thinking in terms of how they lie after each shot. After the tee shot the player thinks to himself: "I lie one." After the next shot he records in his memory: "I lie two," etc. Don't think: "I'm shooting two," or "I'm shooting three." That is counting shots that you haven't yet made, and is, therefore, confusing. Count the shot the instant you make it. And count every stroke, no matter if it breaks your heart. You deceive nobody but yourself when you err in your scorekeeping. And remember that care in this particular is just as important as honesty. The majority of those who are slovenly in their count are not deliberately dishonest, but in this game carelessness in this respect is just as disconcerting to your opponent, if not as disgusting, as dishonesty.

RULE OF PRECEDENCE

In golf, single players, threesome or fivesomes do not have any "rights" on the course, unless under special rulings. They should, therefore, give way to twosomes and foursomes unless they can keep well ahead of the players behind. Beginners, especially, should bear in mind, always, that it is the height of impudence, unreason and ill manners to clog up the course, practicing their shots and taking two or three times the allotted time on each hole when there are other players pressing from behind. The beginner should assume that these other players learned the game by practicing in unused parts of the links where they disturbed nobody, and he should do likewise. Either that or play at a time when he can do so without "gumming" the whole course. A busy golf course is like a stream of water—one impediment and the whole stream is blocked. If five or more players desire to go around together they should keep a lookout behind, and let following players go through. Also they should give notice of their willingness for the others to go through as early as possible, without waiting for the oncoming ones to get close to them.

It should not be necessary, of course, to warn against driving into players ahead. A fast traveling golf ball might injure a fellow player grievously—might even kill him. And don't assume that the ones in front are far enough away. Wait until they are out of range of the longest shot you ever made.

On the putting green do not walk across the line of your fellow player's putt. If your ball is on the other side of the green, walk to it by passing around his ball, or on the other side of the flag. The theory of this is that in walking across the line of his putt you might make a heel print that later would deflect his ball and thus unfairly win the hole from him. This is one of the finest rules in golf, as it is a concrete and visible expression of that sportsmanlike regard that you should always cherish toward your fellow player.

ABOUT TALKING

Some players like to talk when playing golf. Others prefer to keep their own counsel. Be guided in your conduct toward your fellow players and opponents by your observation of their preferences. If they show a disposition to remain silent it is the height of ill manners to press them for conversation. It is always permissible, of course, to express a word of approval of a good shot by your opponent.

Respect the course, particularly the greens. If you cut the sod in making your shot, replace it, or see that the caddy does. Do not walk in bunkers anymore than is absolutely necessary to make your shot, as every additional footprint means just that much added to the possible grief of a succeeding player. Also remember that in bunkers and hazards you are not permitted to touch your club to the ground while addressing the ball. It is really laughable to a real golfer to see a fellow player press his clubhead behind a ball in the bunker, thus improving the lie and "cheating" his way out of the penalty that he deserved by getting into the bunker, and, by the same token, no pleasure to defeat a player who will take that advantage. Even in the fairway it is permissible to touch your club to the ground only lightly, and not in a manner to improve the lie. If the ball lies in deep grass, or in a depression you must dig it out as best you can.

All the foregoing, which, by the way, is far from all that could be said on the subject, applies to the etiquette of the game. As to the actual rules, they fill a small book, and every golfer and would-be golfer should obtain a copy.

For it is only through a strict observance of the rules of golf, written and unwritten, that the game can be really enjoyed. In all the world of sport there is nothing quite so terrible as a slovenly, noisy, careless, inconsiderate wielder of niblick and jigger and spoon. He is the complete ass.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

October 12, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver in London yesterday were each down 3-16d. The New York price declined to 69 cents and the London-New York cross rate improved to 443½.

Our official rates here this morning were with one or two exceptions unchanged from yesterday.

However as the market was weak the Sterling rate was dropped twice in the course of the day, at the close being fixed at 3s. 4½d., the Gold Dollar rate at 75 and the Yen rate at 64⅛.

In the early part of the morning business in Sterling was done at 3s. 5d. for November-December delivery and in Gold Dollars at 76. However, there were strong buyers at these rates and the market eased off until as low as 3s. 4⅝d. for Sterling and 75½ for Gold Dollars was done.

In the afternoon, however, the market steadied up again somewhat and closed with sellers of Sterling at 3s. 4⅞d. for all deliveries up to January and of Gold Dollars at 75½ October-November and 75¾ December-January, with buyers at 3s. 4⅞d. respectively.

At the close there were sellers of Yen at 63¾ and buyers at 63½.

Banks were quoting 3-5 ¾ for Sterling bills, 77 for Gold Dollar bills and 1025 for Franc bills.

China and the Continent sold silver in London yesterday and India bought, the market closing uncertain. New York quote their market as easy.

Exchange Market

In their weekly report on the exchange market, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange:—During the week the London price of Bar Silver has declined ⅛d. for both spot and forward, and it appears that both China and the Continent have been small sellers with Indian Bazaars as buyers. Latest reports quote the London market quiet and steady. During the week under review business has only been transacted on four days, owing to the Chinese holidays, and throughout this period a weak tendency has been noticeable, partly influenced by a fair demand for T.T. The official rate for T.T. on London has dropped ⅛d. to 3s. 5d., but at the close a ¼d. premium is obtainable, and T.T. on New York is being quoted at 75⅝. Although export paper, in moderate amounts, continues to make its appearance, the market shows an inclination towards weaker rates.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 39,593,000, a decrease of Tls. 778,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $38,480,000, an increase of $540,000.

Estimated value Tls. 67,298,000 as against Tls. 38,522,000 held at this time last year.

Ship Conference Wants States To Share Liability

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 11.—The International Maritime Conference in London has adopted resolutions that sovereign States ought to accept all liabilities in respect of ships which they own or operate, in the same way as private owners.

The Conference considered at length the Hague shipping rules and agreed that they afforded a practical and fair solution of the problem of clauses in bills of lading limiting shipowners' liabilities. It decided to take steps to draft an international convention as the most desirable means of solving the problem and to bring the subject before the diplomatic conference sitting at Brussels on October 17.

A High-Cost-Of-Living Tariff

THE new Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act is under a hot fire in the United States, and the fire is constantly becoming hotter. Shanghai business interests which are protesting against the iniquities of this tariff will do well to add to the pressure through their commercial bodies. It appears to be fairly evident, even now, that this act will not long remain upon the statute books, for if it does, according to The New York World and other leading newspapers, it will mean the defeat of the Republicans in the congressional elections next month and a new Democratic President and Congress in 1924. The World says:

Through its Railroad Labor Board, the Harding Administration is definitely committed to the reduction of wages, or, as Wall Street phrases it, "the liquidation of labor."

Through Congress, the Harding Administration is definitely committed to a general increase in the cost of living.

Wages are to come down for those who work, and the cost of living is to go up. The laboring class is to get less income and pay more for all the necessaries of life. How the average family is to make both ends meet under such an economic system is of little interest to the gentlemen in Washington who are legislating money out of everybody's pockets into the pockets of a favored few.

The Fordney-McCumber act is a moral issue as well as an economic issue. Although it is called a tariff, it is in reality a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and if the men who are responsible for it had used the same methods as private citizens that they have used as members of Congress they would be subject to indictment and prosecution under the Sherman law.

Two years ago this month the Democratic Party was on its way to one of the most disastrous defeats in the political history of the country. It is now on its way to one of the most remarkable revivals. It will owe none of its good fortune to its own efforts, for it has done little since 1920 to rehabilitate itself. But what it could not do for itself the Republican leaders have done for it.

No minority party could desire a better issue than the Republicans of the Sixty-seventh Congress have presented to the Democrats. It is an issue on which the Democratic Party has won two national victories within a generation and on which it can win a third if it takes advantage of its opportunities.

The McKinley bill beat the Republicans in 1890 and elected Cleveland President in 1892. The Dingley bill would have beaten the Republicans in 1898 if the Democratic Party had not been wholly discredited by Bryanism and free silver. The Payne-Aldrich bill beat the Republicans in 1910 and made Wilson President in 1912. In the Fordney-McCumber bill is the possibility of another Democratic victory in 1922 and another Democratic President in 1924.

On all the tariff measures that Republican politics in partnership with Privilege has ever enacted the Fordney-McCumber measure is so easily the worst that there is no second in point of economic folly and moral iniquity. It is the one Tariff act for which no excuse can be offered and no justification presented. Other Republican tariffs have at least reconciled an existing state of facts. The Fordney-McCumber schedules were framed in defiance of all facts. No group of men capable of thinking straight for five minutes would ever have dreamed of erecting them into a party program.

There is no stranger psychology than the political psychology of men who deliberately do the wrong thing because they have convinced themselves that they are committed by tradition to the wrong thing. It may be doubted if there are a dozen members of Congress who do not know that the Fordney-McCumber tariff is a legislative monstrosity, yet the Republicans vote for it because it is a Republican tariff, not because they think it is a good tariff or a wise tariff. In fact, many of them have no illusions about it at all and attack it as savagely as any Democrat. But an incompetent leadership committed Congress to it, and an incompetent leadership had to be sustained even though the party itself is plunged to defeat.

There can be no economic peace in the United States, there can be no economic stability, under this tariff, which penalizes American labor, which penalises the American consumer, which votes hundreds of millions into the coffers of special interests, and which sets up insurmountable barriers to the foreign commerce on which the prosperity of the American people depends.

The question raised by the Fordney-McCumber schedules is not partisan in any true sense of the term. The issue is not between those who advocate free trade and those who advocate protection to American industries, for among the severest critics of the bill are Republican newspapers that believe in protection as a principle and would have gladly supported any measure of rational protection.

The quarrel is between the advocates of a monopoly tariff and the opponents of a monopoly tariff, between the advocates of a profiteer's tariff and the opponents of a profiteer's tariff, and it is again the privilege of the Democratic Party this fall to represent the true interests of the American people. This distinction has come to it through little merit of its own in Congress, but the opportunity is there and the responsibility must be met.

The Democrats, with an intelligently managed campaign, can carry Congress in November on the issue of the Fordney-McCumber tariff. They ought to carry Congress. The welfare of the country depends on it, not because the Democratic Party as now organised is an impressive instrument of government but because only through a Democratic victory can the first essential steps be taken to bring the fiscal policy of the United States back to economic sanity.

Waiting

[John Burroughs]

Serene I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, nor tide, nor sea;
I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
For, lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste. I make delays,
For what awaits this eager pace?
I stand amid the eternal ways
And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
The friends I seek are seeking me:
No wind can drive my bark astray,
Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone?
I wait with joy the coming years;
My heart shall reap where it hast sown
And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own and draw
The brook has springs in yonder height;
So flows the good with equal law
Unto the soul of pure delight.

The stars come nightly to the sky
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

Military Schools Show There's Still Optimism

BY JOHN P. MEDBURY.

This is the time of the year that parents are choosing a boarding school for their sons.

They like to find an academy close by so that the collect telegrams won't cost so much when son wires home for money. Every father likes to keep his son supplied with carfare, but not if he has to ride on the Overland Limited.

One boy went to school in a town where the Overland Limited didn't make a stop, but he used to flag the train with his report card.

There was so much red ink on it that when the engineer saw it he thought the boy was bleeding to death.

One father spent two thousand dollars a year to send his son to a military academy where they wore swell uniforms. When the kid came home to visit his father everybody in the hotel took him for the bellboy.

The old man heard one of the guests bawling his son out for not bringing him a pitcher of ice water.

Every kid has to furnish his own towels, napkins, sheets and pillow cases. The average parent doesn't know whether his son is going to school or getting married.

The father sends his boy to boarding school to learn something, but then the kid comes home for two weeks' vacation and forgets it all.

The only things he can keep in his head are the addresses of the girls in town.

He learns his arithmetic out of the telephone book.

His father sent him to school to learn navigation, but he does most of his studying in a canoe.

The only thing he knows about navigation is how many girls he can get into his canoe without tipping it over.

One school advertised that its pupils had three hours of drilling every morning. A mother was going to send her boy there, only she said she didn't want him to be a dentist.

Because no matter how happy a dentist may be he always looks down in the mouth.

This same school taught horseback riding. After two years of training any one of the scholars could go on the merry-go-round without their parents standing beside them.

One boy came home from school last year and told his mother that he had received a hundred percent in his studies. Fifty in arithmetic and fifty in geography.

These academies advertise that they will take any denomination. Sure, from a hundred dollar bill up.

But these schools prove that there are lots of optimists still left in the world.

It's nothing to see an old maid reading their advertisements.

NOW IS THE SEASON OF COLIC AND CHILLS

Use Baby's Own Tablets Against These Ills.

Climatic conditions in the Far East are extremely hard on little ones, especially at this time of the year. Sudden changes of temperature, damp heat, the chill which follows hot close days, all tend to weaken and predispose to sudden attacks of illness.

As a safeguard for their children against fever, colic, diarrhoea, croup and chills careful parents should keep Baby's Own Tablets ready in the house. These Tablets also dispel infantile indigestion and constipation, allay teething pains, expel worms and quickly bring restful sleep in a perfectly natural way. They are guaranteed absolutely pure and harmless.

Why Warm Air In Motion Feels Cool

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
Eminent Astronomer and Authority On Subjects Of Scientific Interest

"Several friends and I were discussing the reason why an electric fan cools the air in a closed room when the air before starting the fan is warm. After a surprising number of reasons being suggested we decided to consult you."—R. A. H., Rochester, N. Y.

I wonder if there was no one in your little coterie who thought of the possibility that the electric fan tended to make the air warmer instead of cooler. That might have led to the real explanation of the phenomenon, by fixing attention upon something else than the temperature of the air as the source of the cooling effect.

The churning of the air of a closed room by a swiftly running fan, together with the heat developed in the machinery itself by friction, unquestionably does tend to increase the temperature of the air and if the process were long continued and the air not renewed the rise of temperature would become easily measurable with a thermometer. The air is heated in a high wind. A rushing meteor makes it incandescent. We must therefore look further for the cause of the cool feeling that the touch of the breeze made by the fan produces upon perspiring faces and bodies.

The word "perspiring" immediately suggests the explanation sought. The internal heat of the human body on a hot day, when the surrounding air is warmer than the body, causes an unusual amount of moisture to exude through the pores of the skin. This moisture, even when not visible as drops of sweat, can easily be perceived. It slowly disappears through evaporation, becoming "water vapor," which is taken up by the surrounding air.

But the air is able to hold only a definite amount of "water vapor," and if it is stagnant, so that virtually the same air is continually in contact with the moist skin, the evaporation goes on very slowly. On the other hand, when the air is set in motion different parts of it are brought against the body, and these fresh portions of air, not being already saturated, readily absorb the moisture from the skin and accelerate the process of evaporation.

Now one step more gives us the explanation sought. It is a fact of physics that the process of evaporation or vaporisation, i.e., the turning of water into vapor, absorbs heat from the surroundings of the evaporating water or moisture. The heat thus absorbed acts as a form of vibratory energy, driving the molecules of water apart so that they pass from the liquid into the more expanded state of vapor. Wherever water or another liquid is evaporating, heat is absorbed and a cooling effect is produced upon the immediate environment.

Thus when air, not yet saturated with moisture, is driven over the surface of the skin by the action of the electric fan, the consequent hastening of the evaporation of the perspired moisture leads to an increased absorption of heat from the skin, in order to supply the energy needed to carry on the evaporation, and the skin is cooled, even though the actual temperature of the air that constitutes the invigorating breeze may be as high as that of the body itself.

It is not a question of cooling by contact with cool air, but, as just explained, of cooling by the withdrawal of heat whose energy is drafted away to meet another demand, and this withdrawal of heat is effected without regard to the temperature of the air that carries off the moisture, so that warm, dry air blowing over a perspiring person may cause a greater fall of the skin temperature than that produced by simple contact with still, cool air.

The same process of evaporation takes place, with similar cooling effects, when a breeze blows on a hot Summer day. Without any change in the air temperature, the perspiring skin is cooled by a current of air blowing over it.

Hence the danger of sitting close to an open window when in a perspiration. Particularly dangerous it is to sit with the back of the neck thus exposed. Many apparent unaccountable and some fatal "colds" are initiated in this way. Good judgment is not always exercised in the use of electric fans or in the opening of car windows.

Reparations Body Investigates Rapid Decline Of Mark

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 11.—The Reparations Commission held an extraordinary session this afternoon to examine the situation resulting from the collapse of the German mark, the value of a paper mark having fallen to 1-650th of a gold mark.

(China Press Service)

Paris, Oct. 11.—The International Reparations commission in session here last Tuesday discussed the German floating debt which on September 30, amounted to 450,000,000,000 marks. Owing to the recent new declines in the mark the Commission reluctantly came to the conclusion that it would be impossible for Germany to fulfil the promises of Finance Minister Herms anent payment of the reparations installment due May 31. Various suggestions were offered by the delegates regarding appropriate measures to be adopted under the circumstances but no definite decisions were reached.

A joint committee composed of English, Belgian and French financiers was appointed to meet in Berlin on October 12 to discuss Germany's financial outlook with German experts and to submit a report to the International Commission anent any counter proposals made by the German delegates.

It was learned that the German Ministry of Finance has proposed the increase of the sales tax from two to two and one half percent beginning January 1, 1923 in order to increase the national revenue.

Britain Will Aid Rubber Growers In The Colonies

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 11.—Mr. Winston Churchill has approved the proposals in the supplementary report of the Colonial Office Rubber Committee, which recommends that the Scheme of Government intervention shall operate in Ceylon, the Malay States and the Straits Settlements as soon as possible.

The rubber scheme is framed to allow of export on the minimum duty of 60 percent of the standard production as a first stage. If during the second quarter after the initiation of the scheme or any subsequent three months rubber did not average at least a shilling a pound the percentage of standard production exportable at the minimum duty would be reduced to 55. If that reduction should be ineffective in raising the average price over the following three months to 15 pence then the percentage would be reduced to 50 and so on by five percent reductions until that average price is secured.

It is proposed to form local committees in Ceylon and Malaya and a central advisory committee in London to facilitate the operation of the scheme.

The proposals will be submitted to the Legislatures of Ceylon, Malaya and the Straits at an early date.

It is understood that the Rubbergrowers' Association has obtained assurances of co-operation, in the event of Government action in British territories, on the part of a satisfactory number of British estates in foreign territories by means of voluntary restriction of output.

The aforementioned scheme is regarded as practically Scheme II in the previous Colonial Office report in an improved form.

The report has been officially cabled to the Governors of the Crown Colonies affected.
